A challenge in supervision - assisting students develop a research question

Many academic supervisors find guiding students in developing a project to be a fraught process. While providing students with a topic might be an efficient option, it will not facilitate them to develop into independent researchers. In this seminar Anne will discuss some of the literature regarding supervision which suggests how we approach the formulation of a research question is critical, and present a resource designed to assist with this aspect of supervision.

Speaker: Anne Hewitt
Anne has a Graduate Certificate in Education (Higher Ed) and has recently completed a Graduate Certificate in Online Learning. She is currently completing the Exploring Supervision Program with RED.

Venue: Room 110
Date: 26 February 2013, 3.15 - 4.00pm