Online quizzes.
Can they be incorporated into a structured learning activity?

Online quizzes are potentially an efficient tool. However, as many of us know (or have experienced) there can be problems when online quizzes have a significant assessment weighting. These include difficulties in creating an effective quiz, technological issues, equity issues for students, and concerns about academic integrity. However, these issues don’t invalidate quizzes as a useful teaching tool. Join us for a presentation about the mechanics of establishing an effective, efficient online quiz, and a round table discussion of how quizzes can be utilized as part of a structured learning activity.

Speakers: Matthew Stubbs and Dr Suzanne Le Mire
Venue: Room 1.10, Ligertwood Building
Date: Friday, 19 August 2011
Time: 2.00-3.00pm

Further information: www.law.adelaide.edu.au/seminarseries